Brothers United Who Dare To Care (BUWDTC) has been working to promote the culture, health, and success of the communities in Washington County since 1996. BUWDTC has a history of conducting activities designed to reduce health disparities of minority communities by hosting training programs, self-help workshops, health education seminars, and more.

BUWDTC plans for this upcoming year include tobacco control education, health education and awareness, violence prevention, ethnic and racial coalition building, and distributing materials on selected disparities at minority community events.
